Breastfeeding Helps Mothers Overcome the Legacy of Abuse and Adversity: It Makes All the Difference

by Kathleen Kendall-Tackett, PhD, IBCLC, FAPA

What an exciting first week it has been! To kick off our 9th Annual Lactation Conference, over 500 breastfeeding fanatics joined us live to hear Kathleen Kendall-Tackett deliver a highly informative Keynote Presentation. Through recent studies, we learn how the act of breastfeeding helps new mothers improve their maternal sleep, lower the risk of depression, lessen anger and irritability and even attenuate the negative effects of past sexual assault.

In case you missed it, public access to this talk has been extended until April 24th. Registered Conference Delegates will have access to all 27 presentations until June 1, 2015.
